Description:

Valencia is a city that blends harmoniously the remains of the past with the most modern and avant-garde buildings.

Only 10 kilometers south of the city lies the Albufera, the largest lake in Spain, which was declared natural park in 1986 and where visitors can experience some of this culture traditions'. This large lake has depth of just one meter and it is separated from the sea by a narrow strip of land with dunes and pine trees. The best way to discover it is to navigate around it on a traditional boat with lateen.

To complete a wonderful day, we'll eat traditional paella in a typical restaurant on the Palmar Island.

In the afternoon we'll approach the twenty-first century Valencia, where we can visit the City of Arts and Sciences which includes buildings such as L'Hemisfèric, the Science Museum, L'Oceanografic and the Palau de les Arts Reina Sofía.
